

The Future of the Women's Movement

Helena SWANWICK (1864 - 1939)

"There may seem to be a disappointing lack of prophesy in a book avowedly dealing with the future; but since I believe the women's movement to be a seeking for knowledge and good, to show what is reasonable and good in the movement is to show what will persist and triumph. Through all our faults and mistakes, we women are aiming at better understanding and co-operation with men, and a better adaptation to one another of conditions and persons. We are having to hammer out for ourselves the right principles of government. We can take them ready-made from no man. Doubtless we shall flounder considerably, as men have done—and do. But there is little fear that in the long-run the best minds of men and women will not have a common principle." (From the Introduction)

Read by LibriVox volunteers. Total running time: 05:40:16

This recording is in the public domain and may be reproduced, distributed, or modified without permission. For more information or to volunteer, visit librivox.org. Cover picture by Christopher Campbell (2015) on unsplash. Copyright expired in U.S., Canada, EU, and all countries with author's life +70 yrs laws. Cover design by Carolin. This design is in the public domain.

The Future of the Women's Movement

The Future of the Women's Movement